DENY CHARGE

Declaring that Nathaniel Randolph of No. 48 Beacon street and John F. Russell of New York, two wealthy Harvard students, were not drunk when arrested, W.

Mr. McGregor feels that the election of his son to the life membership formed a fitting close to his own administration as president. He explained that one reason for his son thus becoming a life member of the society is the desire to follow out the old custom of giving hostages, although in this case it is merely symbolical.

KILLED BY GAS

"It was an ancient custom in order to maintain peace, power and loyalty for hostages to be given in Scotland," said McGregor to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "All the youths in Scotland were available for service to the country, for love of country was greater than love of life and life was often the forfeit to be paid. Of course that custom is really obsolete now and my chief idea in making the boy a life member is to direct his mind so that he will cultivate a love for his country."
